

00

Do We Truly Need Another Series of Articles on Disruption and Delay?

Construction Dynamics Solutions LLC – Topics on Disruption and Delay

Does the world truly need yet another series of articles on disruption and delay? We believe that the answer to this question is “yes” – because, to better understand the complexities of disruption and the intricacies of its relationship with delay, a new perspective is required... and this is exactly what System Dynamics (‘SD’) can deliver.

We are fully aware that System Dynamics is not yet a household name in the construction industry, so this series of articles will start by looking at the basics, and then, step by step, it will move on to the more challenging, complex, and perhaps even controversial topics. The articles are meant to be short, and each one will be focused on a single insight / point of contention.

We aim to publish a new article every week, and we very much welcome your feedback. If you feel that your experience is reflected in our texts, if this is not the case, or even if you would simply like to suggest additional topics to be addressed... please let us know!

Thank you for being here,

The CDS Team.

For more information, please contact us at:

info@constructiondynamics.global

or visit our website:

www.constructiondynamics.global